My original list had three blank numbers under the Selectees. I am not sure if I had just copied the numbers down or if there were three names I had missed in my copy.

The original list was made in El Paso in July 1941 before any Selectees were given ratings. The list was copied again after the war broke and notations were made.

14 Nov 8.5

The Battery Clerk was John Shields and he asked me to help him sometimes. One day during the first week of the war he asked me to help him with a lot of paper work. I took my list of the Battery members with me, so if records were destroyed, one of us would have a roster. My list was copied on the center pages of a notebook.

I carried my list during the three and half years as a prisoner-of-war. The staples holding the notebook together rusted and the edges damaged, as a result some of the names have been ^{made} partly illegible.

Recently I came across them again and thought they might be of some use. The dates of the deaths are the ones I tried to copy at O'Donnell and Cabanatuan. I was taken to Japan in September 1943, so would have missed any deaths at Cabanatuan after that time. There were deaths on the march out of Bataan, perhaps on Corregidor, or among the gorilla warfare (Edgar Stephens was one.), or among the ships sunk on the way to Japan (William Moore was one who died on a ship), which I do not have a record of them.
